20 contribution to Mississippi by becoming a teacher, coach and

22 Mississippi's future--its children, setting aside his initial 23 ambition to become an attorney; and

24 WHEREAS, Speaker Pro Tempore Clark also dreamed of becoming a

33 better contribute to the education of their children if they could 34 assist their children with their schoolwork, in 1966, Speaker Pro 35 Tempore Clark sought to create an adult education program in the 36 school district in which he was teaching; and

37           WHEREAS, his entry into the political arena began when the 38 local school board denied his request to start the adult education 39 program, and in disapproving his request, the board promised that 40 if the local superintendent of education would approve of such a 41 program, the board would endorse it, whereupon Speaker Pro Tempore
42 Clark announced his candidacy for the office of superintendent; 43 and

44           WHEREAS, before the next election for superintendent, the

48 House of Representatives; and
