HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 56

1 A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION COMMENDING THE ESTEEMED AND LAUDABLE 2 LEGISLATIVE CAREER AND PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE MOST HONORABLE AND 3 DISTINGUISHED GENTLEMAN FROM MADISON, REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD 4 BLACKMON, JR., UPON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENT FROM THE 5 MISSISSIPPI HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

6 WHEREAS, the honorable and distinguished Gentleman from 7 Madison, Representative Edward Blackmon, Jr., has tirelessly 8 worked on behalf of the citizens of Mississippi and House District 9 57, situated in Madison County, for 41 years from the historical 10 floor of the majestically aesthetic, ornate and hallowed House 11 Chamber; and

12 WHEREAS, before assuming his seat as the member of the 13 Mississippi House of Representatives from District 57, 14 Representative Blackmon was compelled, at the age of 15, to civic 15 and social activism as an advocate for every facet of quality, 16 after hearing the conversations shared between his father, Edward 17 Blackmon, Sr., and others about the NAACP and the extent of the 18 organization's work during the Civil Rights Movement and efforts 19 to mobilize the Black vote; and

20 WHEREAS, it was during this period, while sitting in the back
21 of his home church, Canton's Mt. Zion Missionary Baptist Church, 22 that the freedom songs ringing throughout the sanctuary convicted 23 his heart and, in that moment, a young and inspired Edward Jr.
24 made the decision to become a part of the movement to effectuate
25 the change he had so often heard his father discuss, and soon 26 thereafter began attending protests that sought to dismantle the 27 suppression of African-American voter registration efforts; and

28 WHEREAS, while participating in one such protest rally, a 29 16-year-old Edward experienced firsthand the cruel bitterness of 30 prejudicial treatment and tainted abuse of authority by law
31 enforcement officers when he and other protesters were tear
32 gassed, arrested and hauled off in the back of a feces-laden 33 chicken truck to be jailed in Jackson, Mississippi; and

34 WHEREAS, inspired by Attorney Carsie Hall, who intervened on 35 the protesters' behalf to secure their release from jail, and 36 whose polished appearance and command of respect from Caucasians
37 in positions of authority left him in awe, a rejuvenated Blackmon 38 was determined to follow the same professional path as Hall, even 39 though he was unaware of the nature of Hall's profession at the 40 time of his release; and

41 WHEREAS, after graduating from Rogers High School in Canton,
42 Edward pursued his collegiate studies at the historic Tougaloo
43 College, completing his baccalaureate matriculation in three 44 years, and was also where he took the Law School Admissions Test

45 (LSAT) as a freshman, scoring high enough to gain admission to Ole
46 Miss, Notre Dame, Michigan and George Washington University (GWU), 47 ultimately choosing the latter, where he and his lifelong friend,
48 fellow Tougaloo alum, and eventual fellow legislative colleague, 49 Willie Bailey, who helped him navigate the waters of GWU; and

50 WHEREAS, upon the completion of the requisite study for the 51 conference of his law degree from George Washington University, 52 the younger Blackmon's first order of correcting the societal ills
53 of the State of Mississippi's foreboding past was to reestablish
54 his father's presence in his hometown, after the senior Blackmon 55 was prompted, out of the necessity of fear for his life and the 56 lives of his family, to leave Canton for New York as a result of 57 being blackballed from employment due to his zealous involvement 58 in the Civil Rights Movement; and

59 WHEREAS, upon his return to Mississippi, and before assuming 60 his seat as the member of the Mississippi House of Representatives 61 from District 57, Representative Blackmon's legal career was 62 birthed at North Mississippi Legal Services in Greenwood, however, 63 the sacred soil of his hometown of Canton, where the flame of 64 advocacy for the "least of these" was ignited, beckoned his return
65 to champion the effectuation of positive changes with an unceasing 66 tenacity; and

67 WHEREAS, using his own financial resources and enduring 68 countless threats to his life, an undeterred Blackmon mounted
69 legal challenges against the monotonous status quo employment

70 practices of the local powers-that-be to ensure that public 71 service sector jobs were reflective of the entire community, which 72 ultimately resulted in the employment of African Americans in the 73 city's police and fire departments and local banks; and

74 WHEREAS, after successfully articulating compelling arguments
75 before the judiciary that usher in an era of integration within 76 the public service sector, Blackmon, who demonstrated himself to 77 be a discerning and methodical legal tactician, then pursued cases 78 against Madison County and the City of Canton, tackling the 79 glaring disparities in quality of life services and amenities the 80 governing authorities perpetuated between the classes, from water 81 infrastructure needs, to sidewalks, and even the manner by which 82 county and municipal officials were elected, before turning his 83 sights to the pervasive issues of inadequacy that plagued 84 communities of color throughout the state, particularly in the 85 area of elected representation; and

86 WHEREAS, upon his election in 1979, Attorney Edward Blackmon, 87 Jr., became the Representative Blackmon upon his election to the 88 Mississippi House of Representatives, but his election was short 89 lived after only one year of service after his district was 90 collapsed during the 1980 legislative redistricting process; and

91 WHEREAS, determined to serve as a voice for the people whom 92 he witnessed endure the hardships of a corrupt system of 93 steel-fisted governing by statewide and locally elected officials, 94 Blackmon's indomitable mettle guided his decision to seek

95 legislative office once again, and after mounting a successful 96 election bid in 1983, he became the distinguished Gentleman from 97 Madison upon being sworn into office on the first day of his first 98 legislative session in January 1984; and

99 WHEREAS, Representative Blackmon wasted no time requesting 100 legislation, amendments and reports that would help effectuate
101 into law the ideologies and policy changes that his constituents
102 had elected him to further, exuding the same assertive confidence 103 he had grown, out of experience, to wear at all times in his 104 personal and professional capacities, and never backing down from 105 a challenge in debate or political or procedural posturing; and

106 WHEREAS, in a true display of intestinal fortitude, 107 Representative Blackmon, who never lost sight of his commitment to 108 be a true ambassador for the people, was appointed to the 109 Apportionment and Elections in 1989, ahead of the 1990 decennial
110 census and the same legislative reapportionment process that cost 111 him his legislative seat in 1980, and began brokering deals with 112 White Democrats in an effort to get more districts for prospective 113 Black legislators; and

114 WHEREAS, after conversations with the first faction regarding 115 his dogged commitment to increasing African-American 116 representation in the Legislature rapidly deteriorated, 117 Representative Blackmon aligned his political agenda with that of 118 a newly emerged second faction of more amiable and receptive
119 Democrats who supported his commitment to successfully achieve

120 what they each desired, which resulted in the Mississippi
121 Legislature's minority composition increasing from five to 45 122 African-American legislators in a single term; and

123 WHEREAS, thereafter, Representative Blackmon, whose record of 124 successful victories when endeavoring to ensure equitable 125 representation of Mississippi's African-American population at 126 every level of governance, was determined to make certain that the 127 state's judiciary was also reflective of the demographic, and upon 128 the completion of his redistricting mission, the judiciary 129 increased from five to 17 judges seated on the bench; and

130 WHEREAS, Representative Blackmon's love and deeply felt 131 respect for the Legislature as a hallowed institution has led his 132 fight to preserve and nurture its integrity for all legislators 133 who equally hold a lion's share in the stake of advancing the 134 direction of the state's economic, educational and political 135 climate; and

136 WHEREAS, during his 41 year tenure as a legislator, 137 Representative Blackmon served on the following committees:

139 Chairman for 8 years; Judiciary B for 20 years, and of which he

153 credible passion for public service, Representative Blackmon,

168 an astute barrister precedes him, and his portfolio of success 169 before the bench encompasses a perfect track record of more than
