7 WHEREAS, each child is unique and learns differently, and 8 many children are likely to benefit from expanded educational 9 opportunities, including tutorial assistance, transportation to 10 another public school, after-school programs, or attendance at a 11 nonpublic school; and

12 WHEREAS, the private sector has historically demonstrated an 13 ability and willingness to address many of the challenges facing 14 society, including education; and

17 educational opportunities for their children, especially children 18 from low income families; and

19 WHEREAS, a credit against federal and state taxes for
